Sonoma Forge Introduces Its First Kitchen Faucet with Pull-Out Spray

Part of the Brut collection, the faucet merges high function and versatile, eclectic styling

(Petaluma, CA, November 2, 2016) In recent years, an increasingly popular kitchen faucet type is the practical, easy-to-use pull-out. Now Sonoma Forge expands its Premium Designer Faucet collection with a pull-out that stands apart from the rest because of its signature “industrial chic” look.

“We have always had kitchen faucets in our lineup, but they all utilized the side spray feature. The Brut is our response to the growing pull-out spray preference,” says Erik Ambjor, President, Sonoma Forge.

Rising a statuesque 16¼ inches, the tall tap featuring the Brut’s raw plumbing parts vernacular makes a strong design statement. The Elbow spout swivels with a reach of 9¾ inches—great for larger sinks, and a hidden button on the pull-out activates the dual spray feature. The single-control lever handles match those in the company's WaterBridge and WherEver collections.

From country farmhouses to urban lofts, the Brut pull-out looks right at home, thanks to its wide range of finishes, from standard Rustic Copper, Rustic Nickel, and Oil-Rubbed Bronze to Satin Nickel and several special-order finishes.

To complete a Brut kitchen suite, choose from point-of-use faucets, bar faucets, side sprays, soap pumps, as well as cabinet knobs and pulls. Continue the distinctive industrial chic look in the bath with lavatory faucets, Roman tub fillers, and coordinated accessories.

Retail prices for Brut kitchen faucets start at $1,680, $1,890 with side spray, and $1,850 with pull-out spray.

Like all Sonoma Forge designer faucets and fixtures, the Brut collection is made in America.
